AIR MAIL FIRM IS FORMED IN S. F.

TRANSPORT PASSENGERS AND FREIGHT, SEATTLE TO L. A.

RELAY POINTS WILL BE MEDFORD AND CONCORD

Territory to Comprise Seven Airports—Seattle, Portland, Medford, San Francisco, Fresno, Bakersfield and Los Angeles.

San Francisco.—The Pacific Air Transport corporation, a $500,000 concern, which will carry United States air mail between Seattle and Los Angeles, was in the process of formation in San Francisco a few hours after word was received from Assistant Postmaster-General W. I. Glover that the government contract for coastwise air mail service had been awarded to Vern C. Gorst of North Bend, Ore.

The territory will comprise seven airports—Seattle, Portland, Medford, San Francisco, Fresno, Bakersfield and Los Angeles.

Because San Francisco has no suitable airport, however, landings will be made at Concord, Cal., near Suisun bay.

Three planes will operate in each direction each day, according to R. L. Gardner, who is assisting in the organization of the transport company. The relay points will be Medford and Concord, at which places planes, cargoes and pilots will be changed.

Thirty-seven hours will be saved between Seattle and Los Angeles over train boat time, Gardner says.

The company is to have ten planes and is permitted to carry express, freight and passengers in addition to the mails. Until the concern has established itself sufficiently to insure prompt mail delivery, little freight and no passengers will be carried, Gardner says.

Postage from Seattle to Los Angeles will be 15 cents for every ounce or fraction thereof. The rate will be 10 cents from San Francisco to either terminal.

The Pacific Air Transport corporation will be one of eight air mail routes in the United States which the government has thrown open for operation by private concerns.

When the air service between Seattle and Los Angeles becomes substantially established, Gardner says, it is probable that the corporation will make arrangements for extension to San Diego through the air line operated by Ryan.

DRIVE FOR NEW LEGATION HOMES

Washington.—Representatives of the San Francisco, Seattle and Portland chambers of commerce conferred with Assistant Secretary of State J. Butler Wright and obtained data which they will lay before their home organizations for the purpose of arousing interest in the department's program for erecting legation and consulate buildings abroad.

Bills will be introduced in the house and senate by Senator Edge and Congressman Porter authorizing the creation of a contingent fund of $5,000,000 to be expended by a commission made up of two cabinet officers and four members of congress for sites and buildings. This will be the forerunner only of further improvements. Assistant Secretary Wright explained that the federal government is now paying about $400,000 a year rent for its inadequate quarters throughout the world.

New Auto Supplants Army Horse

Washington.—Gradually the horse and mule are being pushed out of the army and their places taken by the gasoline motor. For five years the ordnance corps of the army has been working on a cross-country car that would take the place of a horse and this is the development. This car does not require a hard surface road, or even any road at all, and it will give its driver as smooth a ride as the average horse. It will go any place a horse will except across ditches or across streams too deep for fording. The engine being waterproof, though, it will keep on going through water until the driver quits.

Takes Rap at World Court

Denver.—The adherence of the United States to the world court was debated here by Burrus Jenkins, Kansas City minister, and Clarence Darrow, Chicago attorney. Dr. Jenkins advocated the entrance of America into the court as a step toward the abolition of war. The proposed participation in the court was a "silly gesture," Darrow argued, claiming the decisions of the court would be without force.

LANSDOWNE'S WIDOW AND NAVY "AT PEACE"

After Bitter Fight of Months She Calls It Quits With Navy Chief After a Court of Inquiry Exonerates Husband of All Blame.

Washington.—Mrs. Zachary Lansdowne, widow of the commander of the ill-fated Shenandoah, declared her peace with the navy department after a bitter fight of months.

She called it quits with the chiefs of the navy, she said, because, in the report of the court of inquiry which investigated the dirigible disaster, her husband has been completely exonerated of all blame.

Willbur still has to pass upon the navy court's findings, accepted here as a general "whitewashing" of the tragedy, but it is believed that he will approve the verdict, which blames nature, and not man, for the death of the "Queen of the Stars" and fourteen of her crew.

"I feel justified in having spoken," said Mrs. Lansdowne, "for in the report itself is a vigorous expression of approval of my stand—my husband's stand—that the military airships of this country should not be sent out on a tour of fairs, but taken out on military maneuvers only.

"As to my husband's never having protested the flight, as part of the report seems to imply, sufficient refutation of that is found in the report itself. The report brings out quite clearly, I think, that he did protest an early September flight and that his recommendations were overruled. That is what I always have claimed. It still remains unchallenged."

DRYS TO HAVE EXHIBIT OF POISON MAKING DEVICES

San Francisco.—Collecting material for a bootleggers' museum will be the aim this year of Prohibition Administrator Ned M. Green. He believes that an exhibition of the home-brewing plants and moonshine outfits will have a salutary effect on the public.

"Some of the things we are seizing nowadays," he said recently, "could not be better poison makers if they were designed for the purpose. Most of the stills we find are poison breeders. Liquor making requires absolute cleanliness and a certain type of metal containers. A amateur moonshiners make their stills out of milk cans, oil cans, garbage cans or anything else. They use decayed fruit for the mash. No wonder the stuff they turn out blinds and kills the drinkers.

"I am having the agents set aside certain types of moonshine apparatus as a horrible example and warning to those who buy bootleg liquor."

MONTAGUE POSTMASTER TAKES OWN LIFE

Yreka.—Dressed in a complete outfit of his wife's clothing, Austin Murphy, postmaster of Montague and son of a pioneer California family, committed suicide recently in the kitchen of his home. The body was found by two friends, who went to the house when Murphy failed to arrive to open the postoffice.

Murphy dressed himself with care in his wife's garments, the police examination revealed, and then hanged himself on a rope attached to a rafter in the ceiling. He was 31 years old, apparently well-to-do, and no explanation of his suicide, nor his attire, was advanced, either by his wife or acquaintances. The Murphys have no children.

Texas Man Offered Honolulu Job

San Antonio.—The city planning board of Honolulu offered D. E. Culp, chairman of the Texas state park board, the superintendency of its park system, with a salary of $6,000 annually and transportation to Hawaii for himself and his family. The offer said the island board is planning to revamp the entire park system and enlarge it in many ways. Culp said he will delay decision on the offer until after the meeting at Texarkana, January 15, of park officials of six states.

Ogdenburg, N. Y.—Mrs. Kate Oakes Ashley, who started her 105th year in 1926, makes a pair of shoes last ten years. She goes barefoot most of the time, summer and winter.

Seattle Men Urged for Shipping Board

Washington.—Senator Jones, Republican of Washington, presented to President Coolidge the names of H. Y. Saint, Republican, and W. L. Gazzan, Democrat, both of Seattle, for appointment to the United States shipping board.

Stage Company Increases Capital

Sacramento.—The Pickwick corporation of Los Angeles filed with Secretary of State Jordan recently a certificate of increase in capital stock from $2,000,000 to $5,000,000.

HISTORICAL PAGEANT FOR ROSE CARNIVAL

Judge Charles Thompson, third grand vice president of the Native Sons' order, will cooperate with the Rose Carnival Committee in calling a meeting of the Native Sons and Daughters throughout Santa Clara County, to meet in the Chamber of Commerce at San Jose on Thursday January 14th, at 8 o'clock to discuss plans for a historical pageant to be held on the opening night of the Carnival of Roses, this was the report made at the meeting of the executive committee of the Santa Clara Valley Carnival of Roses held in San Jose on last Tuesday morning.

The historical pageant to be given on the opening night of the Carnival is expected to be one of the biggest events of the whole festival. Tentative plans for it call for a pageant depicting the early history of Santa Clara County.

The first prize in the poster contest was awarded to Donald Kapp, a pupil at the Theodore Roosevelt high school and depicts a pierrot garbed in yellow stepping from a red rose, which carries out the color scheme approved by the Carnival Committee. The design will be used on all the advertising for the Carnival of Roses including posters, stickers, buttons and literature.

The Flower Lovers Club and the Carnival Committee will cooperate with the flower show which is to be the opening event of the Carnival. The general Carnival Committee will help in furnishing prizes and judges for the flower show. Prizes sufficient to attract a large number will be offered and the best judges of roses on the coast will be brought to Santa Clara County to pick the winners.

The committee is looking for a building with sufficient space to house the rose show and sufficiently large to accommodate the large crowds which are expected to visit the exhibit. A committee was appointed to investigate the feasibility of holding the rose show in the old Notre Dame grounds on West Santa Clara Street.

The committee went on record as favoring only those carnival features which are of the highest type and the cheap street fakir type will be wholly eliminated.

COUNTY CONSOLIDATED IN BUSY SESSION

The monthly meeting of Santa Clara County Consolidated which convened at the De Oro Club house at Cupertino Tuesday was one of the best attended since its origin.

President G. M. Aylesworth of Cupertino Improvement Club extended greetings and a hearty welcome to the visitors to which President Wendell Thomas responded for the Consolidated.

Geo. F. Morell, the peninsular publishing syndicate of Palo Alto, complimented the organization very highly for its united efforts and effective work.

Two new Chamber presidents were introduced at this time, S. N. Hedegard of Campbell and A. L. Baker of Mountain View. Mr. Hedegard brought to their attention the coming annual "Old Settlers Day", which will be celebrated at Campbell, Feb. 22nd. A cordial invitation was extended to all the new as well as old settlers of the county for this occasion and the earnest cooperation of every member of the Consolidated as asked. The secretaries of the Chambers or Clubs was asked to furnish a list of the old settlers of their respective communities to Secretary Farley at Campbell that a special invitation might be sent them.

Dr. W. I. Merrill, chairman of the sanitary district committee gave a very good report of the progress made in outlining the district which will include Los Gatos, Saratoga, Campbell and Santa Clara communities. With a state expert, much of this region has been visited. The next step will be the making of a preliminary survey. To do this the supervisors will need to call a special election to vote a $5000 tax to pay for the work. The Supervisors cannot allot funds for this survey so it must come from the tax-payers of the district effected. It is needed now and in a very few years will be more needed and more expensive.

President Thomas reported progress on the new county booklet but stated that the committee was now waiting for photos from the various Chambers of the county. The publicity committee was authorized to proceed and present the matter to the supervisors when ready.

H. G. Keesling, president of the Flower Lovers Club addressed the assembly on the county wide movement of beautifying our home places and highways. He urged that the Consolidated members take home to their clubs and organizations the big idea of making this county the rose garden of the world. The members were invited to attend the coming mid-winter flower show in San Jose.

Those in attendance from Campbell were, president Hedegard, Ralston Allison, Dr. W. I. Merrill, H. C. Smith and C. H. Whitman.

The Campbell Grammar school P. T. A. met in regular session, Tuesday, Jan. 5th, with Mrs. Schuyler presiding. After singing the P. T. A. song, reading the Collect and saluting the flag a program in charge of Mrs. Davidson chairman of the Home Dept. was enjoyed.

Readings, "Lad of Mine" and "O Fathers Prayer"—Mrs. Wood. Mrs. Schuyler and Mrs. Davidson each gave instructive talks on "Child Life."

Mrs. Hedegard reported a net sum of $98.92 from the recent Carnival.

Mrs. Wilson's class won the attendance prize. Delicious sandwiches, cake, and coffee were served by the committee.

What becomes of all the Christmas cards?

CLUB ENJOYS ONE ACT PLAY

The Community Hall was almost filled Monday afternoon with members of the Country Woman's Club, their friends and guests from other clubs, who had gathered especially to witness the production of a skit, "The Kleptomaniac" by members of the Dramatic Section of the San Jose Woman's Club.

A very brief business session was held during which a short report of the recent interesting meeting of the Saratoga Foot Hill Club which some of the ladies attended was given and announcements made of other meetings to which the club is invited.

Tuesday, Jan. 12th, Dr. David Starr Jordan will speak at Saratoga at an open meeting of the Foothill Club.

Monday, Jan. 18, a very important meeting of the Country Woman's Club will be held.

Wednesday, Jan. 27th, at the Los Gatos History Club House that organization will consider "Modern American Composers." County Federation President Mrs. James Nixon was present and responded to an invitation to speak as did also Mrs. Hurff, president of the San Jose Woman's Club and Miss Cohen, president of the Los Gatos History Club.

Mrs. Robson as chairman of the afternoon then took charge and introduced Mrs. Lanphear, who gave some reminiscences of winter experiences in Idaho and after mentioning some of the topics of the day as named by outsiders, ended with a word leading up to the title of the playlet which followed.

Miss Jessie Lewis was the third member of the Committee and assisted in dispensing hospitality to the guests.

This as a one act comedy centered about the supposed theft of a purse and was very well presented. The leader announced that it was entirely by amateurs, with no professional training and that one of the places was being filled for a member ill at the last moment. These imperfections however were cleverly glossed over and the audience was very appreciative of the results.

The ladies participating were: Mesdames G. P. Aurich, Herbert Geach, A. D. Grant, C. A. Lohf, W. D. Miller, D. F. Murphy and Herbert Stockton.

BIG GAME TONIGHT

Campbell vs. Palo Alto

The Campbell 130's and unlimited will tangle with the Palo Alto Teams Friday night at Palo Alto. The 130 game promises to be a fast and cleverly played one. Both teams have been defeated twice.

The unlimited game will probably furnish the thrill of the evening. Both teams are tied for the leadership of the P. A. L. each having won three games and lost none. Due to an epidemic of influenza the Campbell team has suffered greatly. Coach Noddin, Carl Nelson, Elbur Clark and Warren Eddleman are the foremost ones on the sick list. Even with these stellar players some Campbell has "Breck" Reed, a veteran of three years and an excellent shot. Ozzie Kalas, the brilliant running guard, whose long shots have featured every game to date, and the dependable Dick Shelby at standing guard. The able substitutes are: Leo Hedegard, Benny Fricano, Harold Cramer and Fat Sundquist.

HIGH SCHOOL P. T. A.

A cordial invitation is extended to those interested in Better Films movement, to attend the next regular meeting of the High School P. T. A. on Tuesday afternoon, January 12th, at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Fred Newton has charge of the program. The officers and department chairman are requested to assemble at 2:30.

WINTER EGG CROP DEPENDS ON CARE

The size of the winter egg crop is being decided these fall days. Give the pullets good care right now is the prescription of O. N. Johnson, poultryman at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture. Johnson urges farmers to give their pullets good fall care if they expect to reap a goodly crop of eggs this winter. When bringing the birds into the laying quarters from the range houses, Johnson recommends examining the birds for lice. If lice are present every pullet should have a pinch of sodium fluoride placed under each wing. He warns against dipping the birds at this late season.

The house, too, needs a little examination before being thrown open to the new guests. If mites are present a solution made up of 75 per cent kerosene and 25 per cent crude carbolic acid should be poured on the roosts and in the nests wherever the mites are located.

Johnson points out that mites and lice require individual treatment. The house lives on the hen; hence an attempt to root it must entail the use of poison on the hen's back. Because the mite lives in cracks and in the flth on and about the roosts and nests and merely migrates to the hen at night to suck blood, Johnson urges that the breeding place of the mites be eradicated.

Pullets cannot consume enough feed to care for their own needs as well as those of the mites and lice when they are pestered by them. For best winter egg production, Johnson points out that the pullets must be free of parasites.

Besides this caution, Johnson urges good feeding methods in the early fall so that the pullets are able to maintain their body weight under the strains of production. Where care is exercised a well-matured pullet can serve as a very valuable addition to the income-producing power of the farm.

Modern Turks Turning to Democratic Ways

In some ways the Turks are rapidly modernizing themselves. The Turkish delegates to the League of Nations wear no fezzes, a correspondent of the Chicago Daily News wrote. They dress like European statesmen. Their spokesman, Tewfik Rouchdy Bey, has formally requested that for reasons of democracy, he no longer be addressed in official communications as "excellency." But in other ways, the Turks are still decidedly oriental. Just as soviet Russia has all but deified the dead Lenin, so the Turks are building up an almost superstitious cult for their national hero and leader, Mustapha Kemal Pasha. Though he is still very much alive, statues are being erected to him in Constantinople and Angora. Many streets in Turkey have been named after him. The Constantinople municipal council is considering changing the name of that city to Kemal Ili—city of Kemal. And on the house where he used to live has been placed a tablet bearing this inscription: "Here the immortal Mustapha Kemal Pasha, in the course of long night vigils, conceived the idea of saving the country." Rumor implies that the reason for his recent separation from his modernist young wife was her too conspicuous ambition that he be elevated to the sultanate.

Two Pickings of Apples

Many careful orchardists are of the opinion that it pays well to make two pickings of certain varieties of winter apples. Practically every one who has tried it agrees that this is true in the case of the Grimes. As soon as approximately half of the Grimes are large enough and mature enough to pick, they are taken off and the remainder are not harvested until they have matured better and become larger.

WINNING THE FAVOR OF 1926

At every moment of his life, if he so wills, man begins a new year. But the average man is not a philosopher, and is content to regulate his ideas on such matters according to the calendar. The conventional is, perhaps, in this respect the better way. Something which happens only once in a twelve month compels thought and fires enthusiasm in a way altogether beyond the compass of a daily experience.

The year that has just departed into the strange limbo of departed time, marked, we may hope with some reason, the nadir of this country's fortunes. If fortune favors the brave, the people of America may fairly expect from 1926 even a more generous treatment than has been vouchsafed them by its immediate predecessors.

We know from experience, however, that fortune in reality is disposed to favor those who favor themselves. The way to win favors is to compel them. It is a method which appeals to the American people. To sit with folded hands and await decrees of destiny has never been their spirit. Political Europe has been moulded in a great measure by her statesmen and soldiers. In the world of finance and trade American influence has stood supreme. That old world in which our position was fast becoming secure has been laid in ruins and is now being slowly rebuilt and stabilized. Politically, financially, industrially, everything is changed. The one thing that remains unchanged is the American character.

What it did before, even in its beginnings, it can, and it will do again. It must re-assert its ascendancy in the new era, as it gained it in the old one, in virtue of its superior gifts in the handling of the practical affairs of life.

The year that has now vanished saw a marked advance in trade, and the new year is the herald of better and greater things. It is now in front of us. It is all future and we can shape it to meet our own ideas so far as business is concerned. Old Fashioned American good times are now with us. That is a settled fact. The possibilities were never greater and the outlook never brighter. We must start out with the firm resolution to make this the biggest year in the history of Campbell.

Certainly nothing is lacking to make every minute of the future count to insure the pleasant vision of a successful past. We have practically every requirement and every facility to realize a tremendous volume of business and you can wage your last dollar that the PRESS is going to maintain and strengthen its past reputation for service and cooperation throughout every week and month of the year.

We are firm believers in a Prosperous New Year—We want every one in Campbell to share in our optimism and to do his or her part toward the end for which we are working.

You have our heartiest wishes—all of you—readers and friends, you know that. Not only from the selfish standpoint of business prosperity—but for health and happiness as well. So here's to 1926. May each of us do a part, the humble and unknown, all together striving individually for a better life, a greater city, a more righteous nation and a better world.

VOLUNTEER LEADERSHIP

There are 4000 volunteer workers in public recreation work alone in the United States and Canada. Add to this the vast army of people who give of their time and effort to carry on the business of making our communities better places in which to live through other avenues of community service and we have an array of talent and a source of good that ought to make our country proud and our people glad that they are in the land of the living.

People who ask nothing and want nothing for their work—volunteer firemen, city and town boosters, chamber of commerce club and church workers, men and women whose charitable and philanthropic acts are never published, and best of all, the non-organized fellows who, in time of need, respond to the alarm of their own consciences—are legion.

To the fellow who asks why the Christmas spirit is not shown all the year, we answer, "It is!" He just failed to take an invoice.

The same fellow who says he would die for his country, complains if he has to use a little time and elbow grease for his community.

You can't have your cake and eat it, and you can't have your town and cheat it.

The chances are the same fellow who is accused of "trying to run things in this town" is kicking himself for giving so much time to his community to the detriment of his personal affairs.

An optimist is a fellow that turn a cloud wrong side out.

Too many people, while their shoulder is at the wheel, keep their hand on their pocketbook.

Wine Men Seek Slash in Tax
Washington.—A campaign to have the tax on wine reduced is to be made by California wine interests while the tax reduction bill is pending in the senate. E. M. The present tax on wine containing under 14 per cent of alcohol is 16 cents a gallon.

The state reclamation board has approved the action of its committee in making arrangements with the board of control for the purchase of lands to transfer to the United States government as a spoil area in dredging operations at the mouth of the Sacramento river. The board authorized the state treasurer to set a new date for the sale of $7,300,000 worth of bonds to be used in the construction of the Sutter-Butte bypass. These bonds have been offered for sale on two occasions but no legal bid was received.

The Sunnyvale (Santa Clara county) board of trustees and citizens of the city have signed a truce and the war over paving improvements which had been ordered by the board and which was said to have imposed too heavy a financial burden upon the taxpayers, has been brought to a close. Peace was declared when a 3 to 2 vote canceled orders for city-wide paving construction. It was decided to submit further street improvement proposals to a vote of the people and with that officially recorded everyone was happy.

Charging that the schoolboy habit of playing marbles "for keeps" encourages gambling and theft, Chief of Police C. W. Potter and Probation Officer W. B. Young of Stockton, have requested parents and teachers to discourage the practice. A case is mentioned by the officers in which a student, after losing all his marbles, was guilty of theft several times at a Stockton store to replenish his supply. The said others followed the same when they lost their marbles.

Individual Responsibility

Citizenship means service. When one is interested in the civil activities of his community, doing his share to promote the best interests of his State and Nation—then he is rendering service.

This is an individual responsibility and cannot be shifted to the shoulders of a few. No Civic body, no Social Service Group or other organization can relieve anyone of his responsibilities as a citizen.

We all owe a duty to America to render patriotic service,—to oppose every movement destructive of the spirit of loyalty, and instill a deeper faith in the principles and ideals of our institutions.

Shall We Be Equal To The Task of paying our debt of gratitude; and fulfilling our obligation to generations yet to come?

Wintering Raspberries by Covering the Plant

Raspberries may be laid down in cold climates and kept through severe winters by following the suggestions below: For tender varieties the bushes may be tipped over—roots and all—and covered. Late in the fall dig the earth away six inches deep from under the roots, using a long-handled, round-pointed shovel. Then with a four or six-tined fork push against the plant about a foot above the ground, and lay the entire plant over. Then cover the whole plant with earth or coarse hay or straw. If the variety is tender cover two or three inches deep, using earth mostly. Hardy varieties in severe climates may be protected by throwing a few shovelfuls of earth on top of the canes, thus allowing the snow to fill in amongst the tops. If late spring frosts are likely to occur, do not raise the raspberry plants until late in the spring; otherwise they may be replaced in the former position early in the spring. Some growers bend the canes over and cover with earth and trash without digging, but in any event care should be taken not to crack or split the canes.

GRAPE GRAFTING— DIFFICULT TASK

There has been considerable interest shown in the last few years about the grafting of the grapevine and, regardless of the fact that men of science have taken the lead, there seems to be a lack of knowledge all along the line. In the first place the work belongs to professionals or well-trained amateurs, writes Charles Boykin of Indiana in the Rural New Yorker. The business man or common farmer cannot make it go. Any of the common methods of graftage is practical, but it takes a fundamental knowledge of the plant to make a success. The graft will grow from the common split graft made about the first of April, just below the ground level without any wax or tying material. The care of the vine consists in keeping the roots off the soil, and not letting any sprouts from the roots grow. The main point in consideration is to protect the union from freezes in the winter. To do so, clear the soil from union about the first of September. A process of hardening then follows, which protects the vine during the winter. When winter sets in, just before Thanksgiving, cover the plant with about eight inches of soil. The first year is the fundamental point to consider. Afterward, if it is an American grape, there is no extra care. But if you are grafting the Vinifera (California grape) the plant must be protected each winter in the eastern states.

There are several methods of graftage. The split graft is good on plants one or more years old. On younger vines inarching is one of the best methods, but the whip graft or wire graft on cuttings of the right stock will prove to be, in the long run, the most successful. Stocks most adaptable to most soils are the Ripatria X, Rupestris 3309 and 3306 and Rupestris St. George. The adaptability of the stock must be understood. Your soil will govern that. Therefore, I say that a professional should take care of the graftage, just the same as the man who propagates your other fruit. An American grape grafted on the proper root will produce from one-third to one-half more grapes than on its own roots.

The Vinifera (California grape) will not grow well in the eastern states because of the phylloxera, an insect that infests the roots of the Vinifera grape. To protect it the grape must be grafted. In the near future I believe that the Vinifera will be grown in eastern America the same as other grapes.

How Much and When to Prune the Apple Trees

How much to prune and in what way to prune apples are questions which will soon occupy the thoughts of many fruit growers. Horticulturists at the New York state experiment station at Geneva have conducted experiments with apples for a number of years and have accumulated information on this subject, much of which is now available in a station bulletin which may be had free of charge for the asking.

The pruning tests were made with Baldwin, Bolken, Esopus, Hubbardston, McIntosh, Spy, Greening, Rome, and King, all good standard varieties. The comparison of little and much pruning was made with trees all headed about two feet above the ground when set out in the orchard. After the tree is started properly, little pruning will later produce a tree with a larger head, having a greater bearing area, with less effort on the part of the orchardist than will much pruning, say the station specialists.

One Time Perseverance Had Its Drawbacks

Judge John S. Partridge said at a dinner in San Francisco: "The lives of criminals often make me think that it would be a grand world if men persevered in doing right as zealously as they persevere in doing wrong."

"There's an anecdote about this wrong perseverance. A judge was traveling to California, and a man accosted him in the smoking compartment one evening. Somehow or other the man had contrived to fill himself up with liquor, and for two solid hours he bored the judge with the story of his home life, which was very unhappy."

"Well, the next morning this man accosted the judge again. He was pale and listless and red-eyed now, and he said in a far-away voice:

"Judge, I told you a lot of secrets about my poor wife last night. They were sacred things, and ought never to have been disclosed. Don't let 'em go any further, will you, judge?"

"Oh, that's all right," the judge laughed. "I saw the condition you were in, and didn't listen to a word you said."

"The man went off with a sigh of relief, but that evening, drunker than before, he tackled the judge again."

"Now, then, durn yer buttons, judge," he began, "you said you didn't listen to me last night, so now I'm goin' to tell you the whole story of my wretched—hie—marriage all over again."

At Least, He Didn't Drop Them on Walk

Dr. H. N. Sherwood, state superintendent of public instruction, was addressing the students of the eastern division of the Indiana State Normal school. As an illustration of the heights to which one may rise, he cited the incident of a poor immigrant who came to this country as a young man and is now the president of one of the large western universities.

Doctor Sherwood said that this man's ignorance was such that, on arriving in New York, he bought some bananas. He had never seen such fruit before, and so he ate peeling and all.

At the close of the speech President B. J. Burris arose and said: "I have been wondering why that young man ate the bananas, peeling and all. I have reached the conclusion that he must have been the originator of the 'safety first' movement."—Indianapolis News.

Cover crops are blanket insurance against excessive soil washing.

Choice apples should be picked as they ripen. Avoid bruising and wrap each apple in paper and pack away.

Clean up the red spider. In many sections this is the worst pest on apples, and this year it is especially bad. Trees lose in vitality when severely attacked by the spiders.

Grape anthracnose under ordinary circumstances is controlled by the usual spraying operations recommended for black rot. However, when the disease appears in an epidemic form it is advisable to spray repeatedly with bordeaux mixture, and also to prune out and burn, promptly, diseased canes and bunches of fruit.

POULTRY FACTS

FATTENED POULTRY BEST FOR MARKET

It is well known that during the last months there is relatively little fresh killed young poultry on the market, because the season for broilers has passed and the great bulk of the fowls has not yet reached the market. Therefore, prices for well-fattened young stock are excellent.

Farmers and commercial poultrymen should never think of disposing of their market poultry in an unfattened condition, says the Department of Agriculture. This is true whether the birds are sold live or dressed, and is apparent since much better prices are paid for well-fattened stock than where the stock is taken directly off the range. Farmers throughout the country lose many thousands of dollars through not properly fattening their stock. The birds to be fattened should either be placed in boxes, stalls, open pens or in fattening crates where they are kept for a period of two or three weeks. The size of the birds is an important factor, because a bird that weighs from three to four pounds usually fattens more readily than the smaller bird. The larger the bird when the fattening period starts, the shorter the time required for fattening. A three-pound bird can be fattened quite well in three weeks, whereas a bird weighing four pounds when put in the fattening crate, could probably be fattened in about two weeks.

Birds are best fattened on moistened ground grains. Several good fattening rations have been used, one of which is as follows: Equal parts, by weight, of cornmeal, ground buckwheat and middlings. Another good fattening ration is composed of two parts cornmeal, one part crushed oats and one part middlings. A variety of grains is a good thing, although cornmeal is particularly valuable for fattening purposes. Whatever fattening mixture is used, it certainly should be moistened with sour skim milk, using enough milk to make the mash into a thin batter which will run out of the pail when the birds are being fed. Milk not only improves the palatability of the mash, which induces greater consumption, but it also improves the quality of the flesh. It should be used whenever possible, for it not only has good fattening properties but also tends to keep the birds in good health.

When the birds are properly fattened they should each gain about one pound in weight; therefore, there is not only a larger bird for market but the price per pound will be considerably higher than where the birds are not fattened. There is no excuse, therefore, for not fattening cockerels and culled pullets, and this year it should be done early because of the increase in grain prices.

Soy Bean Oilmeal Is an Excellent Poultry Feed

Tests at the Indiana experiment station covering four years and involving 960 single-comb White Leghorns and Barred Rocks proved soybean oil meal equal to tankage or meat scraps for laying hens. Mineral matter must be added to the soybean oil meal, however, to make up that deficiency.

The Purdue standard basal ration was used in the tests. It consists of grain, 100 pounds of corn, 100 pounds of wheat, 50 pounds of oats and mash, 50 pounds of bran and 50 pounds of middlings. To this was added 30 pounds of tankage or 35 pounds of meat scraps or 45 pounds of soybean oil meal plus 10 per cent of minerals or 47.5 pounds of whole soy beans plus 10 per cent of minerals.

The mineral mixture consisted of 22 pounds of steamed bonemeal, 24 pounds of finely ground limestone and 15 pounds of salt. The addition of mineral matter is necessary to prevent a great growth of fat.

The United States Department of Agriculture considers soybean oil meal an excellent feed for growth and egg production.

Crowding During Winter Is Harmful to Poultry

Quite a number of farm poultry raisers make the error of housing too many hens and pullets together during cold weather. Hens will lay as well if yarded and well cared for as if on free range. But they dare not be crowded when they are confined.

If the hens are being fed and forced for egg yield alone, we must get them into winter quarters in their pens early in the fall and keep them there without changing them about. Introducing new hens into the flock of laying birds always causes more or less confusion, and this helps in decreasing the number of eggs laid.

Best Turkey Fattener

Old corn fed partly whole and partly cooked, with boiled potatoes, and thickened into a mash with meal, is one of the best fatteners for turkeys. Give the mash in the morning and the whole corn at night. Do not confine them. If new corn is given, the tendency is to have bowel trouble. For this give boiled milk. They must be free from lice to fatten. Turkeys will be so high this year that each carcass should be made to bear as much flesh as possible.
